

Scholarships

Types of Scholarships

- Auto-match – this type of application requires no input from students. It is usually based on major, GPA, minor, student status, student type, student level, etc. All of this information is automatically populated from the student's account at Towson University.
- Apply-to – this type of application requires extra information that the system does not automatically populate. This would include essays, transcripts, resumes, extra questions, etc.
- Conditional Application – this is usually a department-wide application used for all scholarships associated within that department.

Searching for Scholarships

After logging into the site, you will land on one of the three pages:

- Conditional application by a specific department
- List of Recommended Scholarships (apply-to) based on your major, GPA, etc.
- Dashboard

All scholarships may be viewed by selecting Opportunities or Opportunities > All in the black menu bar.

It is important to note that scholarships will open and close throughout the academic year. It is good practice to log on to the site and view all scholarships every couple of weeks.

Search for a specific scholarship by typing in part of the scholarship name in the Search by Keyword box.
