

Self-Advocacy Volunteer Opportunity: Consult on a Pamphlet about ASDs with the University of Maryland

The University of Maryland Division of Community Psychiatry is creating a new educational document about everyday strengths, challenges, and strategies common among young adults with autism spectrum disorders (ASDs). We will distribute this document free of charge to families at institutions including the University of Maryland Medical Center and Children's National Medical Center. We are strong supporters of the self-advocacy movement, and believe that the experiences and opinions of young adults with ASDs must be integral to this document.

We are seeking young adults with ASDs who are interested in collaborating with us on this project. Contributing to this project would involve meeting with us once in a small group, individually, or via email to give us feedback and suggestions on the 7-page document. With your permission, we would acknowledge you by name on the document so that you could include this activity on your resume.

If you are interested in joining this self-advocacy project, please email Kelly Register-Brown, MD at kebrown@psych.umaryland.edu for more information. Thank you!

UMd Self-Advocacy Project
kebrown@psych.umaryland.edu

UMd Self-Advocacy Project
kebrown@psych.umaryland.edu

UMd Self-Advocacy Project
kebrown@psych.umaryland.edu

UMd Self-Advocacy Project
kebrown@psych.umaryland.edu

UMd Self-Advocacy Project
kebrown@psych.umaryland.edu

UMd Self-Advocacy Project
kebrown@psych.umaryland.edu

UMd Self-Advocacy Project
kebrown@psych.umaryland.edu

UMd Self-Advocacy Project
kebrown@psych.umaryland.edu

UMd Self-Advocacy Project
kebrown@psych.umaryland.edu