GIS Helps State Agency Inform Citizens of Government Real Property for Sale

The Center for GIS at Towson University (CGIS) developed and hosts an interactive marketing application to help a modal within the Maryland Department of Transportation (MDOT) dispose of publicly owned property through private sale and redevelopment. The MDOT Office of Real Estate promotes development around ports and transit stations, develops special economic development projects, and disposes of excess real estate owned by the department.

The mapping application allows the public to quickly search for property for sale and for developers to obtain information about publicly-owned, high priority redevelopment sites and state incentives.
