Towson, Md., April 22, 2005 – How does one organize and coordinate the scores of agency relationships among federal, state, local, and regional authorities in the National Capital Region? Protecting this piece of geography, which encompasses jurisdictions in the District of Columbia and the surrounding areas of Maryland and Virginia, must hold daunting challenges.

On May 9 at 7 p.m., Thomas J. Lockwood, director of the Office of National Capital Region Coordination (ONCRC), will offer his perspectives on securing the National Capital Region. This event, the second lecture in the Edward V. Badolato Distinguished Speaker Series in Homeland Security, will take place in the Field House Minnegan Room at the Johnny Unitas Stadium at Towson University.

Thomas J. Lockwood is a member of the Department of Homeland Security's senior leadership team and, as director, he is responsible for coordinating and strengthening ties between public, private and regional authorities in the National Capital Region.

Admission is free and open to the public, but space is limited. Call 410-704-3200 to reserve a seat. Complimentary parking will be available.
