High-Quality & Equitable Education
- Towson University’s Student Success Programs, in collaboration with the Greater Baltimore Urban League, hosted a Saturday Leadership Program for 150 Baltimore City youth with variety of workshops addressing leadership development and college readiness.
- 40 Baltimore City high school and middle school students participated in Saturday writing workshops as part of the Young Writers Workshop: Advocacy & Action Project. This program was led by the College of Education’s Maryland Writing Project, a site of the National Writing Project, and took place at the Central Library of the Enoch Pratt Free Library.

Strong Neighborhoods & Sustainable Communities
- 253 TU students participated in “Town and Gown,” a day of service where students assist local homeowners and businesses by cleaning up uptown Towson.
- A strategic partnership is being explored with TouchPoint, a collaboration between BGE and Whiting Turner in West Baltimore. Early conversations are exploring potential connections around the arts, supporting aging community members, workforce development, and athletic opportunities for youth.

Lifelong Health & Well-Being
- Towson University hosted the Baltimore County Department of Aging’s launch of the Age-Friendly Initiative, focused on improving the quality of life for all County residents that want to live, work, play, and age in Baltimore County.
- Faculty and students within the Department of Nursing provided health screenings and health education sessions to multi-generational families and diverse ethnic groups at the Goodnow Community Center health fair.

Vibrant Arts & Cultural Community
- Over 600 people participated in the Sweaty Eyeballs Animation Festival, a BTU Emerging Investment and an arts entrepreneurship initiative in collaboration with the Parkway Theatre and the Maryland Film Festival.
- The College of Fine Arts and Communication worked with 227 students in 5 schools throughout Greater Baltimore through the Towson Theatre Infusion, an arts-in-education and artistic outreach program focused around the fall performance of Hamlet.

Thriving & Competitive Economy
- Dr. Stella Tomasi, College of Business and Economics, hosted America’s SAP Users Group at Towson University. Participating partners included Johns Hopkins, SAP, and Northrop Grumman.
- The College of Business and Economics hosted 20 students from North County High for a hands-on supply chain activity and discussions around career and educational opportunities.
