Workshop Overview

Despite the dehumanizing conditions of Nazi camps and ghettos, many victims resisted through art.

- Over 40,000 clandestine works—drawings, paintings, and sculptures—were created under threat of death.
- These works embody resilience, spiritual survival, and defiance against oppression.

This workshop will:

- Highlight Holocaust art as a form of resistance.
- Feature historical works and survivor insights.
- Provide opportunities for participants to create reflective art pieces of their own.

Why Attend?

- Engage with powerful stories of courage and creativity.
- Discover how art became a tool of survival and resistance.
- Participate in a meaningful, hands-on experience.
