The intricate art of oceanic navigation and land finding that allowed Pacific islanders in double-hulled voyaging canoes navigating by stars and swells to journey as far as 2500 miles to find tiny dots of land in the middle of the ocean.