At the crossroads of German, Italian, and Slavic cultures the Habsburg Mediterranean port city of Trieste developed a multilingual literary culture.

What does this mean for the study of European literary modernism?