Position:
College of Health Professions invites applications for a full-time Academic Coordinator in the Physician Assistant master’s degree program to begin in the Fall 2019. The position is a 10-month faculty appointment and has a required summer appointment. The Academic Coordinator carries a reduced teaching load and is responsible for coordinating the quality of education during the didactic year. Academic rank as a Clinical Assistant Professor/Clinical Associate Professor will be commensurate with qualifications and university promotion and reappointment criteria as they relate to clinical (non-tenured) faculty.

Qualifications:
Master’s degree in Physician Assistant studies or related area with NCCPA certification and eligibility for licensure in the state of Maryland by time of appointment. Minimum of three years of clinical or professional experience.

Preferred Qualifications:
Three years of college level teaching; a successful record of building relationships across disciplines and/or serving as an effective liaison with external health care organizations. Active participation in state and/or national professional organizations and experience in higher education or health administration/leadership and assessment are preferred.

Responsibilities:
Successful candidates will be responsible for overseeing, coordinating, scheduling and evaluating all aspects of the first-year didactic phase of the physician assistant program curriculum. The Academic Coordinator will provide continuous review and update for all first-year didactic course materials and objectives, ensuring all material is in compliance with national accreditation standards. As a faculty member, responsibilities include teaching, advising, service and scholarship.

Department and Program Information:
The Physician Assistant Studies Program is located within the Department of Health Sciences, one of the five academic departments in the Towson University College of Health Professions. One of the oldest in the country, the program has an Accreditation-Continued status until 2023 and is offered in a joint format with the Community College of Baltimore County. In addition to the Program Director, the program has 6 full-time dedicated faculty positions and several long-term part-time faculty. Thirty-six students are admitted annually.
